To the Memory of the Rev. Thomas Franklin Waters M.A., Founder of the Ipswich Historical Society and Historian of Ipswich, this study is dedicated in the knowledge that had he lived it would have borne his name.

INTRODUCTION.

It is hoped that this present study is but the first of a series which will, when completed, comprise a complete transcription, with the necessary charts, of all the ancient and modern burial places in greater Ipswich. All the material has been collected and is in manuscript form awaiting publication. It includes, beyond the material presented here (the Old North, or High Street Burial Yard of Ipswich), its continuation, the Highland Cemetery, the South Cemetery, the Locust Grove, and the three cemeteries of the Linebrook Parish of Ipswich. It also includes the burial yard of the second or Chebacco Parish of Ipswich, now Essex, and a portion of that of the Hamlet Parish, now Hamilton, in use when these towns were parts of Ipswich, and the private cemetery of the Nourse family in Ipswich Village.

A few fundamental facts should be kept in mind with reference to these studies. Neither the original owners of the ancient burying grounds, the Parish Churches, under whose care and jurisdiction they grew up, nor the towns to which they were later conveyed, kept or at any times possessed charts or other records of the location of graves. It is obvious that until recent times the ownership of individual graves and plots and the lines of demarcation were very vague. Again it was not until comparatively recent times that statute law required those in charge of the dead to file with town officials the time and place of burials. For this reason town records of deaths are quite incomplete.

In doing this work we are deeply conscious that we are but completing that which a long line of antiquarians had begun, but which, through a series of varying circumstances, was never brought to completion.

The first to start this work was the late Abraham Hammatt (1781-1845). Primarily a genealogist, his work was in the eighteenth century and it is known that he copied many of the Ipswich stones of that period as aids to his studies. Unfortunately much of his work is lost.

Next in time was the work of the late Augustin Caldwell and Arthur W. Dow, who, in their Ipswich Antiqua-rian Papers, copied and published many of the outstanding Old North inscriptions. We have been through this publication, checking all which they included and have found some which have since disappeared from the cemetery. Such stones are indicated in the text. None of the above scholars made any pretence at a complete study.

The late John Nourse entered the field somewhat later and began a detailed scale chart. It is evident from his papers that he spent a large amount of time and did much hard and thorough work but unfortunately he did not cover more than a part of the Old North Yard. His approach was both admirable and enviable, making a scale fac-simile copy of each stone. We would have liked to continue his admirable example but the difficulty and expense of printing made it impossible. His papers were turned over to the custody of the Town Clerk. Through the courtesy of Mr. Edward Cogswell, the present incumbent, we were given access to them.

The last worker in the field was the late Rev. T. Franklin Waters, who, with the assistance of Mr. Henry Spaulding, started the work anew. He contemplated publishing his results in the series of the Ipswich Historical Society. With his scholarly mind he approached the culties of the problem in a thorough manner. intention to divide the Old North Yard into areas delimited permanently by granite markers, for the purpose of charting the stones. A few of these were placed. The preliminary work was completed and many inscriptions were copied, but unfortunately his untimely death brought his wide-spread antiquarian research to an end. Through the kindness of Mrs. Waters we obtained the use of his papers.

After we surveyed the material in hand, it was our intention to make a compilation of all the work previously done, thus bringing to completion the attempts of our We did this, copying the material on indipredecessors. vidual cards for purposes of alphabetical arrangement. This done, we went to the Old North Yard only to discover that the work previously done covered for the most part identical sections with important areas untouched. When we considered the charts prepared by Mr. Nourse and Mr. Waters we found in the first instance that the individual inscriptions were not keyed to his chart, in the latter that it had been started on the basis of granite markers which had not been placed. Faced with these obvious difficulties it seemed wise to start the work afresh. This also necessitated the making of a new chart. When all the stones had been card-indexed we checked them against the work of our predecessors, thus discovering those stones which had disappeared since their various work.

It became obvious to us very soon that the number of burials on the basis of calculated population was far in excess of the number of graves which had been marked with stones. Any scholarly approach to such a problem is difficult. One might postulate the burial of any number of persons by probability but such a procedure would at best be filled with inaccuracies. The obvious solution was to discover some source of information as to burials which had not been marked with stones. Town records did not supply this information, neither did parish records. We examined both. The only other possibility was records of undertakers. We discovered that the office and profession of undertaker was comparatively recent. In the eighteenth and seventeenth centuries certain of the parish officers performed this function and no records could be discovered except in the case of the Linebrook cemeteries.

Coming to the period of the professional undertaker we were very fortunate to discover that Mr. Ralph K.

Whittier had the private records of the late Mr. Philip Clark and his father. He very kindly turned over this collection for our use and study. In them we found evidence of many burials in the various cemeteries and in a few cases approximate location of the same. These will be found in the text marked with an asterisk.

Some may ask the value of such a work as this. answer to this question lies primarily in the growing interest in genealogical studies. In such work one of the most important primary sources of data is cemetery inscriptions. Beyond this is the sentimental value attached to the knowledge that when time and the weather have destroyed many of the stones, there will still exist a record of those places where the dust of the generations has found abiding rest and of the names of those who have contributed to the heritage which is ours. And last there is the conviction, because every worker in the field of Ipswich history has felt this a task worthy the effort, that were they here, they would be pleased in the knowledge that another generation of workers in their chosen field had brought the work to conclusion and thus realized for them those dreams which the accidents of time made impossible of fruition.

One practical value has already accrued from this work. During the summer of 1934, as a project to supply work for the horde of local unemployed, an ambitious project was started to "restore" the Old North Burial Yard. The work was begun and some three hundred ancient stones were uprooted from the dust which they marked and hallowed, sorted according to size, and replaced in straight rows, orderly to be sure, neat without a doubt, but quite at odds with all historical and sentimental precedent.

When we learned of this project, eminently worthy in its intent though disastrous in its results, we, with the officers of the Ipswich Historical Society, the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities, the Society for the Preservation of the Beauties of Essex County, the local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and many historically minded citizens, protested against this unusual procedure. The result was that the stones were replaced on the graves where they had been first erected. In this work the local administrators of the project gave the most whole hearted co-operation, received suggestions in the most kindly spirit, and on the whole, despite the unfortunate beginnings, the work was reorganized, the stones handled under our supervision, weak ones repaired, cement foundations placed under those where it was deemed necessary and prudent, several ancient tombs in danger of collapse rebuilt and permanently sealed, a task which, in the ordinary course of town expenditures, could never have been provided for by funds received from ordinary taxation.

Had it not been that we had completed our preliminary work, viz, charting and copying every stone, the project would have resulted in disaster for it would have been impossible to replace the stones on the graves to which, in the course of nature, they belonged.

In the practical use of this study may be pointed out certain principles we have used in its construction. First, in copying the inscriptions from the stones it was our original intention to publish fac-simile reproductions. This was impossible and consequently we have followed this procedure. Every name, date, and memorial verse or inscription has been transcribed with the original spelling, punctuation, and variants of stone cutting with these three exceptions—the ancient form of s (f) has been eliminated, also the ancient use of Y as an equivalent of th, and the various forms of the and sign. It will be noted that we have not followed, in many instances, the line arrangement as found on the stones. We have done this to facilitate the printing and the reading.

In some instances in cross-indexing, where we could not be sure whether names were maiden or middle, we have assumed, where reason and dates indicated, that they were the former. In doing this our intention was to be inclusive at the risk of an occasional error.

In preparing the charts we had hoped to have them drawn to scale but practical considerations made it impossible. We had to choose between this, which would have resulted in a series of large awkward maps, or free-hand diagrams far more convenient for use. We chose the latter method. It will be noted that first there is a key map, giving sections into which the cemetery is divided, and that this is followed by a series of sectional diagrams in which each stone can be located.

Some may question the inclusion of the terraces as part of the ancient yard. In that they were part of the area transferred to the town by the Parish in 1859, and in that the Highland Cemetery does not begin until the brow of the hill is reached, the terraces constitute an integral part of the Old North Burial Yard. Therefore they have been included in this part of the work.

In passing we point out that at one time these terraces had names, for each of the various presidents of the United States (always omitting the Democratic presidents—presumably no affront to the dead was desired, by making them restless in a nomenclature of which they did not approve in life). Because this system has passed out of use, we thought it wise to ignore the once prevalent custom and list them within the neutrality of numbers.

One other thing should be mentioned. In each case where a grave has been marked as containing a Revolutionary or Civil War soldier, we have indicated it so that if the stones should disappear or disintegrate, the resting places may still be kept in knowledge and our patriotic societies may continue their splendid work of honouring them.

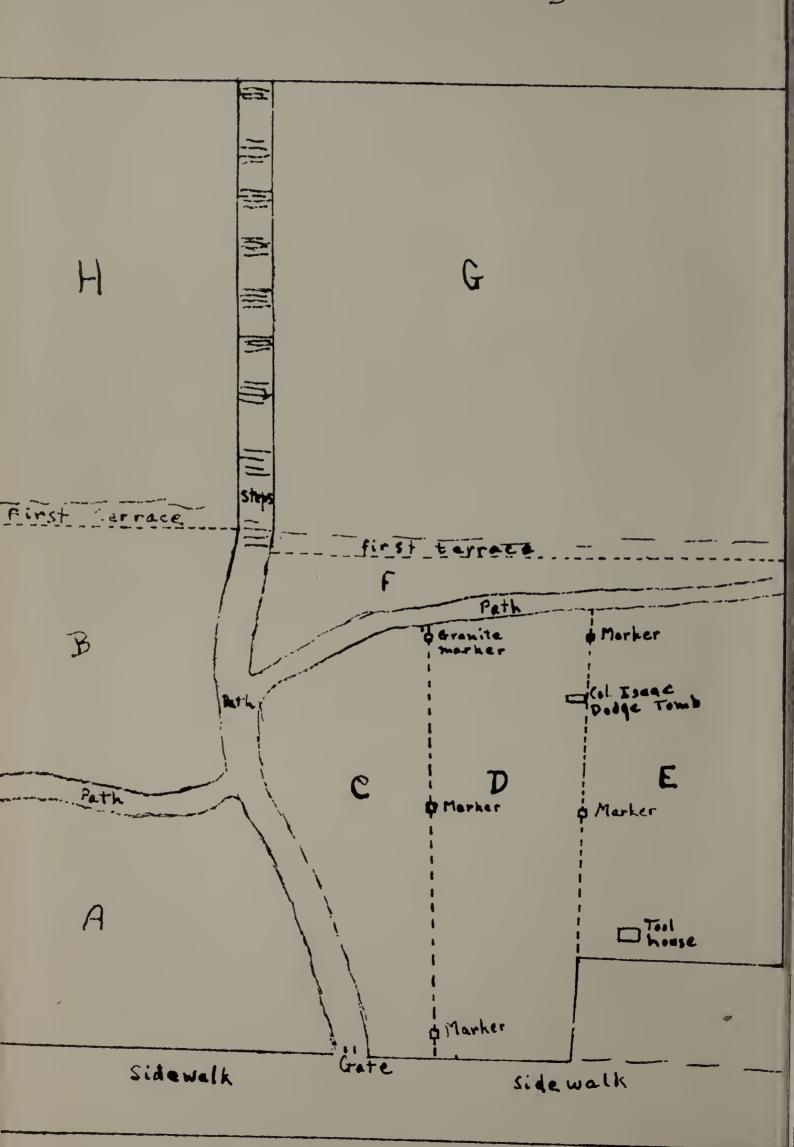

It has been our intention to present this study as free from errors as possible, but we feel perfection not possible. If any be noticed, which we hope will not be the case, we shall be happy to acknowledge them, and avoid their recurrence in the continuation of this work.

It would seem appropriate in such a work as this to include a history of the cemetery itself from the time it formed the limit of the town in 1634 to the present day. We must sincerely apologize for the omission of such a history. We attempted, by research in the Registry of Deeds of Essex County, to extend the deed history of the area given by Mr. Waters in his history of Ipswich but gave up in despair after having reached the conclusion that every pertinent known fact had been included by Mr. Waters and to extend it would necessitate the employment of a trained surveyor to attack the problem through all the deeds of those whose land has ever abutted the cemetery in its various stages of growth.

Men of a century and more ago apparently did not realize that their descendants would be at all interested in the half acre or the "quarter and halfe quarter of acre of land" they transferred so blithely with no mention as to where these fractions of land might be located.

May we point out to those interested that our fellow-townsman, Mr. Edward Darling, has been working on the problem for several years, and while he kindly offered to us the use of his results to the present, we felt in justice to him that his work should be carried to completion by him. Until then we suggest that anyone interested in the history of the land of the cemetery itself consult Mr. Waters' Ipswich in the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

ABBREVIATIONS

It will be noticed that each inscription in this book is preceded by a letter and a number. The letter refers to the section of the cemetery in which is located the inscription, and the number to the particular stone. To find a stone by means of this key, it is necessary to use the diagrams published in this book.

Translation:

Here rests the mortal part of Lieutenant Col. Mr. John Denison, Esquire, Sheriff of Essex County: great-grandson of the most illustrious Daniel Denison, Esq., late Major General in the Province: and also of the not less illustrious Richard Saltonstall, Esq., formerly one of the Governor's Council, (in each of whom, as in a father and champion ever to be remembered, New England used to delight,) a descendant not unworthy of his ancestry; having been liberally educated at Harvard College, endowed with extraordinary acuteness of judgment, remarkably skilled in jurisprudence, gifted with unequalled steadiness of mind, mighty by his social and Christian character, an ornament and pillar to the state; while he lived, deservedly beloved by all good men, and at his death, Nov. 25th, 1724, in the 35th year of his age, lamented in no common degree. He left a memory more precious than the most fragrant ointment.

C-129-Domus Grata

D—204—Erected to the memory of Col^o. Isaac Dodge, who was born March 9th, 1733, died June 27th, 1785, in the 53d year of his age.

And of Mrs. Elizabeth, his wife, who was born March 10th, 1730; and died Sep^t. 22d, 1785, in the 56th year of her age.

His mind was open, ardent, and enterprising: He was a kind husband, a tender indulgent father. In his house he was liberal and hospitable: Faithful to his trust, upright in his intentions, in his operations active, persevering and extensive: By which he afforded Employment and subsistence to the industrious and the indigent; contributed to the benefit of the publick, and merited the Character of a useful and valuable member of society.——

His wife was moral, thoughtful, and sofar as her slender health would permit, attentive to the benefit and happiness of her Family. Deeply affected by the death of her husband, and the increasing infirmities of her feeble constitution, she languish'd and, three months after him, expir'd.

Short was their sepration; soon rejoin'd In the dark grave, to native dust consigned, They sleep, till death his human prey restore, And earth and skies and time shalt be no more.

He set life above wealth and having early earned the means of temperate living gave himself to liberal studies. A lover and a scholar in every part of nature; he thereby drew so near to God as to trust him entirely. Wise, gentle and single-hearted, he lived cheerfully, and accepted death without misgiving.

John Rogers of precious memory, whose dust lies near: Alone in office after, until death translated him to the high reward of his labors. He slept in Jesus, May 10th, A.D. 1775, AEt. 74.

A mind profoundly great; a heart that felt The ties of nature, friendship and humanity; Distinguish'd wisdom, dignity of manners, These marked the man; but with superior grace the Christian shone, in faith and heav'nly zeal, Sweet peace, true goodness, and prevailing pray'r.

Dear Man of God! with what strong agonies he wresteled for his flock—and for the world! and like Apollos mighty in the Scriptures, open'd the mysteries of love divine and the great name of Jesus!

Warm from his lips the heav'nly doctrine fell; And numbers rescu'd from the jaws of hell, Shall hail him blest in realm of light unknown, And add immortal luster to his crown.

E—166—Here lies interr'd the Body of Mrs. Susanna Smith, wife of Cap^t. John Smith, who departed this Life Decem^r. 26th, 1781, Aged 82.

Why should we mourn departed friends?
Or shake at death's alarms?
'Tis but the voice that Jesus sends
To call them to his arms.
Are we not tending upward too
As fast as time can move?
Nor would we wish the hours more slow
To keep us from our Love.

Why should ye tremble to convey
Their bodies to the tomb?
There the dear flesh of Jesus lay
And left a long perfume.
The graves of all his saints he bless'd
And soft'ned ev'ry bed:

And soft'ned ev'ry bed:
Where should the dying members rest

But with the dying Head?

The Ipswich Historical Society was organized in 1890, and incorporated in 1898. It has purchased and restored to its original architecture the ancient house it now occupies, one of the finest specimens of the early Colonial style. It has issued a series of Publications which have now reached to No. XXIX, which are of general interest.

We wish to commend our work and our needs to our own citizens, to those who make their summer home with us, to all scattered throughout our land, who have an ancestral connection with the old Town, and to any who incline to help us. We can use large funds wisely in sustaining the Society, and erecting and endowing our new building, and in establishing a permanent endowment.

Our membership is of two kinds: an Annual Membership, with yearly dues of $2.00, which entitles to a copy of the Publications as they are issued and free entrance to our House with friends; and a Life Membership, with a single payment of $50.00, which entitles to all the privileges of membership.

Names may be sent at any time to the President. Orders for the Publications, sent to the Secretary, will be filled at once.
